Advertisers who wish to prepare dated auction lists, etc., should keep in mind that delivery of the GRAPHIC sometimes takes upwards of three weeks to some parts of the country and Canada. In addition, we frequently run a few weeks over our publishing deadline! Therefore, we advise closing dates of no sooner than the 15th of March, June-September and December for dated matter.

Important Notice

At our recent audit with the post office, it was pointed out that our authorization for second class mailing states a frequency of January, April, July and November -- not summer, fall, winter and spring. We are therefore required to carry these dates on the cover, even though we are somewhat behind this schedule (this issue is actually being mailed in mid-June). Whether or not we will ever be able to co-incide with the official date is uncertain. In any event, please don't complain to your local post office that deliver of the GRAPHIC takes two months!

An Invitation

The town of St. Johnsbury, Vermont is celebrating its two hundredth anniversary this summer, with most activities centering around the July 4th weekend. Your editor will be having a display on recorded sound at the local museum during the weekend, and he invites you to stop in and say "hello" if you're going to be in the area. Please see the schedule of events for St. J's Bicentennial in the advertising section.

And Last, But Not Least...

(Contemporary Reviews of Edison "Needle Type" Records)

The Needle Type records produced by the Edison company during the final months of production were perhaps not given enough time to catch on before they were discontinued, and are consequently not easy to locate nowadays. Our illustration is courtesy of Ron Dethlefson; the 12" records mentioned in The Etude bear gold labels with black lettering.

We have recently encountered some contemporary reviews of the thin Edison discs, and it would seem that the records were favorably received — though note that The Etude articles didn't appear until after production had ceased at the end of October, 1929! Both columns have been edited to show only the reviewers' remarks about Edison, and we thank Jim Tennyson of Toronto for sending The New Yorker piece.

(January, 1930)

WITH THE new year come many master discs to appeal to the tastes of all music-lovers. And with them comes our personal wish that they may make a happy new year to everyone who finds joy in recorded music.

Among the newest records brought to our attention are the first needle-cut ones made by Thomas A. Edison, the inventor of the first records and the first producing machine. They are, needless to say, fine examples of recorded art.

Edison records now present the voice of Martinelli, the Italian dramatic tenor. His first, No. 47003, gives a faithful projection of this popular tenor's vocal artistry in arias from "Aida" and "Martha."

Edison disc No. 47004 contains an interesting performance of four Chopin Preludes and two Etudes, one of which, the second of Trois Etudes, has never before been recorded. They are all played by Moritz Rosenthal, that famous pupil of Franz Liszt who is said to carry on the technical genius of his teacher. Rosenthal's amazing left hand work is realistically projected from this record, and so are his technical accomplishments.

Like-wise enjoyable are two Edison recordings by the eminent violinists, Carl Flesch and Albert Spalding, particularly since the recording-balance of violin and piano are excellent. Flesch's disc is distinguished by his performance of Hubay's "Hejre Kati—Scenes de la Czarda," No. 47001, and Spalding's disc reveals a fine violin contribution to his artistic transcription of Schubert's song, Hark! Hark! the Lark!, No. 47005.

(March, 1930)

Edison, who began to make records the new way and then abruptly abandoned that field, brought out two most desirable discs containing Haydn's Quartet in C major, Opus 33, No. 3, played by the Roth Quartet. Here, too, is a musical work that flows along in that natural and genial manner which characterizes Haydn's quartets. The Roth Group play it with rare tonal beauty and finesse.

POPULAR RECORDS

Edison for All—More

Sweet Solos—A List

To the four catalogues from which most review records are selected (Brunswick, Columbia, Okeh, and Victor), we add a fifth—Edison. Edison has been making records since they were cylindrical—and you still can buy cylinder records from Edison, if you happen to have one of those good old phonographs around the attic—but it is only recently that Edison records have been manufactured to fit any machine.

Edison's list of star attractions is not yet complete (the popular records so far released include many radio routiniers), but new music is issued promptly and the discs have notable clarity and volume. Edison also has made a "gems," which means a medley from some score, the Edison selection being from the talkie, "On With the Show." It is well done, although the piano modulations from song to song sound a trifle bare, if not quite "as naked as a cornet solo," as Huneker used to say. There is a hot crooner on the Edison list-Miss Erminie Calloway—who holds her own with her contemporaries in "Do Something" and "What Did'ja Wanna Make Me Love You For?" There also is an interesting instrumental combination headed by Waldo Mayo, whose odd doings with voices as backgrounds may be observed in his fantasies on "Pagan Love Song" and "Don't Hang Your Dreams on a Rainbow."

THERE are any number of good dance records for you to choose from now. Such as:

TRUE BLUE LOU and THE FLIPPITY FLOP— B. A. Rolfe and his Orchestra. Good, honest dance music by a maestro with a fine sense of such business. (Edison)

WAITING AT THE END OF THE ROAD and ONE SWEET KISS—Phil Spitalny Music. Unusually snappy and full-toned fox trots. (Edison)

Wicker Update

Among the several kind readers who responded to the last Forum were three with wicker-related material. Ralph Woodside and Paul Graham sent pictures of wicker phonographs, for which we thank them. Reader John Heliker offered a tantalizing recollection of seeing a white wicker table model Edison Amberola in a shop about 15 years ago! This suggests that some firm may have manufactured wicker cabinets for small Amberola mechanisms. John recalls that the cabinet was a peculiar "rounded shape" on one side. Who knows — perhaps Edison contributed more than the mechanism!?

1910 Consumer Report: Victrola XVI vs. Edison Amberola

Four years ago, the Victor Talking Machine Co. of Camden, N.J. introduced the first widely available "enclosed-horn" talking machine which was (and is still) known as the "Victrola." The original style has undergone several changes, and is now referred to as the Victrola XVI. Since its introduction, it has distinguished itself through ever-expanding sales and penetration of exalted social circles, into whose domiciles a talking machine had never before been welcome. The Columbia Graphophone Company, aware of this success, has begun offering its own version of this deluxe talking machine. The cylinder record buyer has had, until recently, no recourse other than the conventional openhorn talking machines with which our readers are no doubt familiar. Thomas A. Edison has now thrown his hat into the ring by offering through the National Phonograph Company the first deluxe enclosed-horn cylinder talking machine, called the Edison Amberola. With the public thus afforded a choice of exotic instruments playing both types of record style, our panel of experts has rushed to their rescue with an in-depth comparison of the finest talking machines these two mighty organizations have to offer.

In the course of this comparison, our panel's observations were directed toward the following considerations:

- 1) Soundbox
- 2) Motor
- 3) Cabinet Design
- 4) Cabinet Finish
- 5) Overall Operation

Each of these categories is represented by a letter grade for quality: A, B, C, or F.

Victor-Victrola XVI Price as Tested: $200 Sold by the Victor Talking Machine Co., Camden, N.J.

- 1) Sound Box: Victor Exhibition. This unit needs no introduction, having been in widespread use for 9 years. In common with its other metal parts, the Victrola's soundbox is gold-plated. Loudness, projection, fidelity; all grade A.
- 2) Motor: As found in the Victor VI: nickel-plated, triple spring. Runs with minimal noise. Ample power to play for 15 minutes with one winding. Speed is well-controlled, easily regulated. Rates an A.
- 3) Cabinet design: Two pair of doors: upper pair to modify volume of sound; lower doors permit access to record storage (150 record capacity, in albums). Appears well-thought, and indeed is the third major cabinet variation offered in 4 years. Grade: A.
- 4) Cabinet Finish: This is a strong point for the Victrola. Choices are Mahogany, Quartered Oak (Weathered, Fumed, Antigue, Gunmetal, Early English, Golden, Driftwood, Flemish), and for a $50 premium, Circassian Walnut, totaling the buyer's choices of finishes to ten! The quality of the finish on our test instruments was truly wonderful. The cabinet is first-class in ever respect. Rates A.
- 5) Overall Operation: The Victrola is a convenient and satisfying instrument to operate. Records are removed from the lower compartment in albums, 15 at a time. A convenient shelf can be pulled out on which to lay the album and select a record. Access to the turntable is simple and direct. The album must be removed from the shelf before the sound doors can be opened. Grade: A.

Edison Amberola Price as Tested: $200 Sold by the National Phonograph Co., West Orange, N.J.

- 1) Sound Box: To date, two different soundboxes have been supplied with the Amberola. The Model L plays 4-minute cylinders and the Model M plays 2&4-minute cylinders. Both reproducers are finished in Oxydized Bronze. We were fortunate enough to examine two Amberolas with both types of reproducers represented. Both play quite well. The Model M is a cleverly-worked out unit in which the 2-min. and 4-min. styli are positioned without removing the reproducer from its mount. Loudness, projection, fidelity all rate A.
- 2) Motor: New design, but similar to that of the Triumph: Double-spring, belt-driven. Runs with slight noise probably due to cabinet design. Ample power to play for 15 minutes with one winding. Speed is easily regulated. One of our test machines exhibited minor flutter, which was remedied by lubricating the governor. Grade: A.
- 3) Cabinet Design: No provision is made for volume control. Single door for access to record storage (100 record capacity in drawers). Door must be fully open in order to pull drawer out. Cabinet sill is notched on right-hand side so as to expedite entry and exit of records to mandrel, but care must be exercised in any event. Open interior design allows motor noise to be heard. Grade: B.
- 4) Cabinet Finish: Choices include Mahogany, Quartered Oak, or Mission Oak. We were told that by March Circassian Walnut would be available for an additional (cont. p. 13. bottom left)

Victrola XVI just removed from packing crate, with metal parts not yet installed

"YOU CAN'T KEEP A GOOD LOWN DOWN"

A Brief Account of Bert Lown

The name Bert Lown is hardly one that causes kneejerk accolades from music writers, critics, or even collectors. He was neither a jazz giant, like Ellington or Goldkette, nor a well known commercial bandleader like Waring or Olsen. He would seem to occupy a place, both in taste and time, that guarantees obscurity. The main purpose of this article is not to assign him some high place in the musical firmament, but simply to shed some light on an orchestra leader who rarely makes it out of the footnotes.

Bert Lown was born in White Plains, New York on June 6, 1903, making him the contemporary of such greats as Ben Pollack and Bix Beiderbecke. Educated in the public schools, young Bert (like so many of his musical contemporaries) was an active member of the high school band. Possibly from parental persuasion, he did not become a working musician but pursued a career as a salesman. In the "boom" economy of the mid-twenties Lown rose rapidly, becoming an executive salesman by 1925. Bert had not lost his interest in music and popular diversions, and shortly afterwards found a way to combine his talents in music and salesmanship. Noting how large a part entertainment played in the society and economy of New York City, Bert Lown decided to open his business, a theatrical booking agency, there, rather than to rough it in the upper state resorts. It was thus "make or break" in the big city.

After a few months of moderate success booking the usual run of vaudeville odds and ends, Lown, taking a cue from Meyer Davis, concentrated on booking dance bands and vocal-novelty acts. It was, after all, the "Jazz Age", full of club and house parties. In the second year of his business, toward the winter holiday season of 1927, a dejected young musician came into the office. A year to two older than Lown, this hopeful would change the course, not only of Lown's career, but of popular music history. His name? A certain Hubert

"Rudy" Vallee.

On this grey December day, the would-be singer asked for work, saying (according to The New York Times for Aug. 23, 1929) "he had been trying to place himself with other leaders around New York without success." According to Lown (in the same account), this man was "downhearted and didn't think he had any ability and pleaded for a chance." Agent Lown took pity on the struggling performer; arranged for him to sing at the Scarsdale Country Club, and even bought him a new suit! Vallee enjoyed some success at this engagement. In January of 1928, Lown got a contract to furnish music at the Heigh Ho Club at 35 East Fifty-Third Street. At this job, Vallee led the band as well as singing refrains. Lown's usual ten percent take proved quite lucrative, as it was here that the nucleus of the "Connecticut Yankees" outfit was formed. Within months. Vallee had established himself on a solid basis, where, previous to meeting Bert Lown, he was just an unemployed musician. (In fairness, it should be noted that Rudy Vallee had achieved some distinction as an alto saxophonist in England. He played with the two best early groups, the Savoy Havana Band, led by Bert Ralton of Art Hickman fame, and later, the Savoy Orpheans. While no jazz master, his playing was well regarded by his British associates. Whatever one may think of his warbling, there can be no denying that Rudy was a hard-working and very competent musician.)

Not long after Vallee became fairly well known. Lown himself had taken the plunge into performing. He took over active direction of one of the little bands booked by his agency, and under the name "Bert Lown and his Loungers" made records for the small independents like Diva and Perfect. The income from these releases was not great (usually just flat fees for sporadic dates in these little studios) but the thrill of bandleading was now "in his blood." Even on the low budgets of these sessions, using old acoustical methods, Lown occasionally sprang for good jazz slanted sidemen. Despite often poor sound and mediocre vocalists, some of these minor label issues hold up pretty well from a musical standpoint. Contrary to unkind assertions, Lown was not just a "front man," but a decent trombone player.

Meanwhile, "back at the office" at 1658 Broadway, Rudy Vallee wanted to expand his horizons, since telling Lown of his Heigh Ho Club following. Lown managed to get him some radio spots on the big metropolitan stations and a moderate publicity campaign. According to Lown (New York Times, Aug. 23rd), it was he, not Vallee, who hit upon the idea of putting "a sob-like tone in his voice" for these and other performances. After these broadcasts, Rudy was vaulted into fame, especially by the female audience, as the first "singing idol" of popular music.

On the strength of his East Coast fandom, Vallee got a nice recording contract with Victor. This was at a time when his friend Bert Lown was still waxing disks for the "minor leagues." The two had already formed a business partnership in May of 1928, where each had a drawing account of a hundred dollars a week (not bad in those days!) and Lown received two thirds of the combined profit. By the middle of 1929, with a major label contract and the possibility of a movie role, Vallee wanted nothing more to do with Lown. On August 22nd Bert Lown was forced to file suit against Vallee on the grounds that his erstwhile partner "refused to carry out an agreement to share profits with the man who says he brought about his success." The lawsuit made the front page of all the New York papers and it dragged out for over a month. The stakes were high, as Rudy was soon due in Hollywood, where his hefty fee would fall largely to Lown. On October 8th, just weeks before the stock market crash, the court handed down its decision: the Lown-Vallee orchestras would be dissolved, and Vallee would surrender all the financial interest to Lown, but would retain exclusive use of his biggest assets, "Rudy Vallee" and his "Connecticut Yankees."

After the Vallee affair, Bert Lown turned to managing his own orchestra full-time, retaining just a supervisory role at the office. Not two months after the settlement, Lown got his biggest plum: a contract to supply an orchestra for the famous Biltmore of New York. This contract, which began in December of 1929, included options to broadcast as well. A "wire," as it was called, was considered as good as, if not better than, a record contract.

For his hotel orchestra, Lown took his Loungers outfit and expanded it, in addition to hiring his big stars, Al "Tex" Philbin and Adrian Rollini. We can be indebted to Bert for the fact that he refused to assemble a sedate group of "salon bores," the usual curse of hotel engagements. A further plum was a recording contract with Victor the following year. (One wonders about the possibility of Vallee and Lown having the same day scheduled for a studio session; was the hatchet buried by then?) Despite a worsening economy, things were going strong and bright for Bert Lown.

The first Lown "hit" was not released for Victor, however, but for Hit-of-the-Week, on one of their ubiquitous laminated cardboard disks. Bert had rewritten and rescored an earlier song from 1925, and "Bye Bye Blues" became his theme song. Oddly, the old version had been waxed for Victor (no. 19662) by Fred Hamm, but had caused no particular stir. Be that as it may, Lown recorded many other tunes for Victor, including a stand-out version of "Please Don't Talk About Me When I'm Gone." He gave a great deal of freedom to both Rollini and Philbin; thus even "potboilers" are often saved by superior solos. The "Lown sound" is upbeat, and on the better sides Bert and the boys swing convincingly.

Unfortunately, the rosy life and career of Bert Lown were not to last. His wife Viola sued him for separation and custody of their five year old daughter, Virginia Lee (New York Times for Dec. 4, 1931). Lown sued for divorce, alleging his wife was guilty of misconduct with a former member of the band. From these sorry newspaper accounts, one can gather how personal problems engaged almost all of his energies. Despite an income of seventy-five thousand dollars in 1931 alone, Lown went downhill fast. The messy divorce trial went on for months, not being settled until the spring of the next year. His output for Victor studios fell off, with only five sides released that year. Perhaps the most sudden blow fell in June of 1932, when he was told his contract at the Biltmore would not be renewed. Thus in the depth of the Depression poor Bert was without family or his band. He spent his days "at the office" booking sad-sack novelty acts till even this dried up and he had to give up 1658 Broadway.

As his business evaporated, the one bright spot of 1933 was a spate of recordings for Victor. Bert led a mainly studio group as his Biltmore outfit had dispersed the previous year. The product of these sessions were not released on the "scroll" label, however, but on the cheaper Bluebird disks, an economy move by Victor to bolster sales.

Poor Bert hit bottom in 1934. Instead of lavish hotel suites, he was reduced to subsisting in a humble apartment at 806 Bronx River Rd. In late autumn of that year he had his final fall. He filed for bank-ruptcy in New York Federal Court (New York Times for October 17, 1934). The newspaper report told that Lown "was once a well known orchestra leader." Bert, less rosy, described himself simply "as an unemployed musician." Fiscally, his liabilities outweighed his assets three to one. He managed to survive on sporadic bandleading stints and royalties from hit tunes written in the heyday period of his Biltmore engagement. Tired of occasional work, especially lean during the '38 recession, Bert accepted a position as music director for the Hotel Copacabana...the one in Rio!

Bert remained in Brazil, at the famed hotel, until returning to the States shortly before Pearl Harbor in 1941. He was active in a number of war relief agencies, including the National War Fund from 1941 to 1943, the Red Cross War Fund till 1944, and then served on the Committee for Economic Development. After the war, Lown was helped by these connections to secure civilian employment. He joined with the Muzak Corporation in 1946 and stayed for over five years. Later he worked for the Columbia Broadcasting System, becoming director of affiliate relations for the CBS television network in 1954. He enjoyed a good career at that network till it was cut short by his untimely death in Portland, Oregon on November 20, 1962. Lown had been living in Hollywood with his second wife, Carylyn.

If trombone solos could ever be considered "opulent," 22583-A contains the epitome.

While no giant in the popular music field, Bert Lown deserves more than an honorable mention. Having experienced numerous setbacks, he always climbed back up, refusing to drown in his sorrows (or alcohol!). While his recorded output was not large, it managed to sound distinctive in an era swamped by copy-cat commercialism. Although some of his sides are marred by poor vocals (courtesy of the late Elmer Feldkamp), can the "Biltmore Trio" be any worse sounding that the "Aragon Trio" with Wayne King's Orchestra? If some disks are so marred, then they and others were frequently graced by the smooth trombone of Tex Philbin and the valiant bass sax of Adrian Rollini. Bert Lown deserves better than footnotes!

(Reminiscences of Record Collecting During an Earlier Era)

by John Doulou

(Editor's note: John Doulou's first article appeared in GRAPHIC no. 58)

In 1942 young John obtained his first job. He went to work at "Warren's biggest little drug store," Shank's Drug Store in Warren Ohio. The building was very old and consisted of a basement where garden supplies were sold, the main floor where prescriptions and patent medicines were the mainstay, and two more floors above. One top floor was used to mix grass seed and for modern stock storage, and the very top floor was drug store stock left over from another by-gone era... hair brushes and tooth brushes made from horse hair, straight razors, talcum powders, bay rum, body liniments, etc.

Bob Shank was the owner and pharmacist and World War I veteran who told young John that Billy Murray entertained the troops during the Big War. He also saw Billy and the Victor Eight perform in one of the local theaters in the 20's.

Young John was paid 25 cents an hour. His job was clean-up boy. Floors, walls, shelves, and drug store stock was to be kept sparkling clean. In winter he was to keep the sidewalks clean from snow: first responsibility. He worked after school on weekdays and all day Saturdays; also on Sundays when the demand for prescriptions warranted it.

From 1942 to 1944 John had become a regular customer at the black second hand store. The following records were found there at 5 cents each:

Col. 731 - If Money Talks, It Ain't On Speaking (1902) Terms with Me - Miss Minnie S. Emmett

Marconi 0245 - Ye Banks and Braes o' Bonnie Doon (1907) Henry Burr. In 1906 Columbia signed the inventor of the wireless telegraph,
Sig. Guglielmo Marconi, to come up with a better sounding record, and in October, 1907 he produced Marconi Velvet Tone Record. Material was first form of vinyl - 50 years ahead of its time. Did not have machines to do them justice in 1907.

Col. A929 - Play That Barber-Shop Chord/Something You (1910) Don't Expect - Bert Williams

Col. A1014 - Mysteries/Immortality - William Jennings
(1911) Bryan, with facsimile autograph on label. Failed three times in bid for U.S.
presidency.

Special Columbia Advertising Record - Good Night,

(1913) Little Girl, Good Night - Henry Burr/
Edward D. Easton speaks for Columbia.

He was president of Columbia Graphophone Co. in 1913. Sold for 25¢; reportedly more than 3,000,000 copies were sold.

Col. A1685 - Panama Pacific International Exposition
(1915) Souvenir Record - Star Spangled Banner by President Wilson's daughter, Margaret Woodrow Wilson. Picture label/Medley of Patriotic Airs - The Columbia Band

Nation's Forum 69333/77666 - From the Battlefields of (1918) France - General John J. Pershing/Loyalty - Ambassador James W. Gerard

Vic. 18534 - Madelon, One-Step March - Victor Military (1919) Band. Vocal chorus in French by Marcel Journet, celebrated opera star.

Vic. 23005 - Dinah/Ida, Sweet as Apple Cider - Fess (1930) Williams & Royal Flush Orchestra

Cameo 349 - Carolina Mammy - Walter Leslie. Leslie is (1923) Ernest Hare and he sings this in Jolson style - who he understudied.

Regal 9477 - Carolina Mammy - Bob Thomas. This is (1923) also Ernest Hare, but he sings this version "straight" and not in Jolson style.

One day in 1945 Mr. Foos asked young John if he would like to come with him to Canton, Ohio where he knew of a closed Victor record store. It seems the owner of the building was getting ready to tear the building down and wanted to dispose of the records and machines, counters, etc. The building was boarded up since the 30's.

Young John was able to muster up exactly $20.20. "Boy! Twenty dollars and twenty cents at 5 cents a record equals four hundred and four records!"

Both record collectors young and older couldn't believe their eyes when an older lady who owned the building opened the door, and after their eyes adjusted to the darkness discovered they were in a room approximately 24 feet wide by 50 feet deep and the ceiling had to be 18 feet high. There were thousands of records everywhere—on the shelves, on the counters, and on the floor. "Where are the machines?" asked Mr. Foos. "Oh, I sold all sixteen machines to a dealer," replied the older lady. "How much did you sell them for?" asked young John. "One hundred dollars in cash," was the reply.

"Uh-oh. Something is wrong here," thought young John. Used machines sold for two dollars each, so times sixteen, the price should have been $32.00 — not $100.00. Since the machines were in mint condition, did that make the difference in the price?

Before the collectors started to look through the records, the astounding ridiculous high price of one dollar each was set by the older lady. "Whether it be 10" or 12", it didn't matter." The four hundred and four records immediately shrank to twenty.

Everything was covered with dust, dirt, grime and rat droppings. Anything that was either cardboard or paper showed signs of being eaten. The best records were in the middle of the piles. John couldn't get over the fact that there were twenty to thirty duplicates of the same record. The Victor 12" red seal record of "Aloha Oe" by Alma Gluck and Orpheus Quartet, no. 74534 (1917), took the prize with fifty-two duplicates.

Mr. Foos and young John stayed for three hours looking and pleading with the lady to come down in her price, but she wouldn't budge. John came away disappointed with the following records — only twenty and at one dollar each:

Vic. 35250 - Why the Trusts and Bosses Oppose Pro-(1912) Gressive Party/The Farmer and the Business man - Theodore Roosevelt

Vic. 35252 - Address to the Farmers/Democratic Prin-(1912) ciples - Woodrow Wilson

Vic. 35256 - Labor and Capital/Who Are the People - (1912) William Howard Taft

Vic. 35718 - Address at Hoboken on Return of Burial
(1923) of 5,212 American Soldiers, Sailors,
Marines and Nurses/Address at Washington Limiting Armament - Warren G. Harding

The owner of the building counted the records and said, "That'll be twenty dollars. Don't You want to buy any more?" "Sure," replied young John, "but I only have twenty cents left."

"Do you want this?" pointing to a metal sign about three feet in diameter made like a phonograph record with a red label of a song by Enrico Caruso. This was the sign in front of the Victor record store when it was open for business. "You can have it for twenty cents." Young John parted with his last twenty cents and he and Mr. Foos departed for home.

They learned later from another out-of-town record collector that he was also summoned to buy records from the owner of the building, and when he arrived the big iron ball had already destroyed the brick building which housed the Victor record store and everything that was left inside — including the thousands of mint but dirty and grimy Victor records!

The next experience in young John's record collecting will be when he discovers his first Edison Diamond Disc Phonograph with some record surprises. The year will be 1946.

P.S. The most important book for record collectors since John started collecting over 44 years ago has just been published. It is titled "Pop Memories 1890-1954" by Joel Whitburn. Steve Sullivan spent three years doing intensive research for this monumental project at the Library of Congress Recorded Sound Reference Center. Published by Record Research, Inc. "Old John" recommends this to young and senior collectors of phonograph records.

Vintage Vignettes by David Milefsky

A Classical Triad

(Bispham, Edison & Caruso)

With Vignette No. 3 Graphic readers I hope will, along with myself, congratulate the Editor whose efforts and midnight ponderings have brought this magazine to its 60th issue. My basic subject matter will, however, "beat" that number since it unfolds in 1921, a full sixty-six years ago.

Occasionally information which I have been looking for comes either from fellow collectors that I have known for years or from newly found acquaintances who happen to share an interest in our great field. This has occurred either via correspondence or, to a lesser extent, by a chance meeting with someone in a second-hand store or a flea market who beat me to that batch of records by ten minutes, more or less. My opening line in the latter case generally turns out something like "Hi! What type of stuff are you interested in?" If this meeting results in the exchange of names and addresses I consider it a "find" in its own right.

There was one instance, however, that a repository of certain Edison information walked through the front door at home here in Boyce, Virginia. In fact, at the time that particular phenomenon occurred, I had no idea whatever that any discussion of early records would ensue. This seeming apparition of which I speak turned out to be none other than the ninety-year-old mother of my landlord, Alan Caspar. She is Blanche Dvorak Caspar, born in Switzerland, who now lives in a mountain chalet outside of Boulder, Colorado.

When she entered with the cheery greeting "Hello, David!" spoken in her typically melodious coloratura, I quickly responded with "Hang on, or I'll lose this" in an untypically churlish growl. The reason for this unseemly response was due to the fact that I was making crucial adjustments on a Standard Model "E" style Edison.

At that point in our conversation Blanche's eye was caught by the ten-rib cygnet horn which was lying on a near-by table and being inspired by such a vision, thoughtfully commented, "Ah! I see that you have a grand musical antique of Edison!" Then with her characteristic sense of drama coupled with her French accent, she launched into "nostalgie".

However, before hitting upon the gist of this article, which will explain how, when, and in what capacity her husband would work for T. A. Edison, I feel that a short bit on Blanche's own musical background will shed some light on the personality of the famous operatic baritone and recording artist, David Bispham.

While living as a teenager in New York with her family, Blanche happened to read a newspaper interview with Mr. Bispham. This particular article alluded to Bispham's interest in the development of the voices of young American singers. Well, upon her writing to him, his secretary sent a note saying that she should set up an audition especially because she was seriously studying voice at the time. In short, the audition went well in that Blanche was encouraged by Mr. Bispham to keep on with her studies. Although, as fate would have it, a professional musical career would not become her livelihood, Blanche, to this day (she was born March 13, 1896), never ceases to amaze friends, be they old or new, with her fine vocalizations.

And now, on to the aforementioned "gist" of sixty-six years ago. Although she related the story to me at the time of that visit, I asked her to write the particulars for me when she returned home to Boulder, which she did in the following letter dated Sept. 25, 1986.

Dear David-

How did my husband meet Mr. Edison, and as a result of this meeting was hired to work for him? (His name was Dr. C. V. Caspar)

The year was a depression year, 1921, thus after his graduation from Cornell University as an organic chemist my husband found that job hunting was a long and useless chore. One evening as he read the ads he exclaimed: "Blanche, listen to this!"

"This" was a description of an interview given to a reporter of the then flourishing "New York Herald". The gist of the article was that Edison considered the average college graduate as "uneducated" and that few could pass the questionnaire he would ask the Herald to print. To prove his point he would give a job to anyone who could answer it correctly.

The paper printed the test which was taken in an armory (?) by over 2,000 students (also looking for jobs!). One of them was my husband. A few days later, one of some 300 who passed the test, he received a letter asking him to come to a specified address to take a second test, this one in mathematics, which relied on common sense. Again, one of maybe 30, he received an invitation to be interviewed by Edison.

This resulted due to my husband's knowledge and interest in classical music in his joining two other young men who formed a jury for the selection of records to be placed in Public Libraries. My husband was the classics critic, another was the "Hearts and Flowers" man and the third selected the popular records.

So the trio, seated on easy chairs, smoked and listened to records and made their selection.

I remember that in the original test they were asked how many miles to the moon, facts in literature, geography, history, etc.

In mathematics they were to fill a pail with water from other pails each with a specific content -- in fact all questions were, as I said, matter-of-fact and judgement.

I believe only 25 or 30 passed the second test.

All my love,

Blanche

P.S. Good luck on your story.

So much for the letter. In any event, Dr. Caspar came home with a box of Apollo chocolates for his wife, handed them to her with a flourish and said, "Compliments of Mr. Edison!" Of course she knew that Mr. Edison, himself, did not buy the chocolates, but expected that they would survive a while longer.

For the third leg of this triad I must credit my friend John R. Wheeler of Chagrin Falls, Ohio. John, who was in great part responsible for my article about his parents, Elizabeth and William Wheeler, sent me the copy of the "New York Herald Tribune" from Feb. 21, 1926 which deals again with Enrico Caruso.

As you read you will notice slight discrepancies from my story on the Wheelers (for which see this column in the New Amberola Graphic #58). The Herald Tribune clipping misspelled 'Sorrento' as 'Corrento'. In addition, the hotel in which Caruso died was called the 'Victoria' in Elizabeth's memoirs and the 'Vesuvius' in the Herald Tribune. (see top of next page)

--- And for now, a good summer to all.

The Problems with Die Castings

Ben Tongue recently sent us a copy of the Newton-New Haven News, a newsletter which is sent to customers of their die castings. An article entitled "Let the Buyer Beware" contains some revealing information about cheap die castings and gives us some clues as to why so many old phonograph parts (particularly those found in Orthophonic Victrolas) have deteriorated.

The article states that many die castings, even those on the market today, fail due to an excessive quantity of lead - in some cases four to five times the amount recommended by the American Die Casting Institute. "This is not evident in new castings, but over a period of time parts can crumble and actually disintigrate." It wasn't until 1948 that industry standards were established to limit the amount of lead in zinc castings and iron in aluminum. "The plan was a direct outgrowth of the problems encountered by the fledgling die cast industry in the 1920's and 1930's when lead contaminated die castings had a tendency to crumble from the inevitable intergranular corrosion."

The writer goes on to warn that there are cheap imports on the market today which do not subscribe to the ADCI guidelines. They "look like die castings, feel like die castings, finish like die castings and act like die castings, but not for long." Items such as a utility knife and an apple slicer/corer could easily fail and even cause injury to the user due to metal contamination.

It is therefore clear that a collector's problem with an Orthophonic tone arm bracket is directly related to a cheap tool sold at the local flea market which may not stand up under repeated use.

Caruso Himself, Five Years After Death

Caruso's tomb of marble and granite in the great cemetery of the rich at Naples

*ᡃ*ᠰѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѧѴѧѴѧѴѧѴѧѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѦѴӓѷӓѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѦѴѧѴѧѴѧѴѧѴѧѴ

H, SIGNOR, you wish to see the mortal clay of the greatest singer the world has ever known. A little moment and you shall have your wish."

It was an aged Italian whose shock of gray hair and sagging step added much to the sepulchral voice and tomblike atmosphere of the rainy morning in the great cemetery where the rich of Naples are buried. The "guardian of the dead" fished under his cape and produced a key. He shuffled up a small flight of stone steps which led to a magnificent house-like tomb of marble and granite, unlocked a heavy grill of bronze, slid back a heavy door and entered. We followed. My companions were a young New York surgeon and his uncle, a New York merchant. Before us was a beautiful marble sarcophagus covered with heavy blankets. The guardian threw back these blankets as one would fold back the covers of a bed. "Behold!" he said.

"Behold!" Said the Attendant, and There Was the Same Face, Changed Not the Slightest, That Opera Audiences Knew

By WILBUR FORREST

Before us was Enrico Caruso. Dead five and a half years, the great tenor lay there seemingly asleep. The same face seen a thousand times by tens of thousands in the Metropolitan Opera House had not changed even a trifle from the day he breathed his last in a Naples hotel on August 2, 1921. The same hands which had made the accompanying gestures to the notes in operatic roles lay peacefully at each side of the body, perfectly preserved. The broad-winged collar, bow tie and expanse of shirt front in linen and silk were faultlessly white, and the dress suit which clothed the body might have been neatly pressed only yesterday.

The remains of Caruso are inclosed in a hermetically sealed glass case which rests within the large marble receptacle, holding the center of the spacious tomb. Around the walls are the spaces which will some day hold the remains of the dead opera singer's closest relatives. Their names are already chiseled in the polished marble.

The great tenor's body represents today one of the wonders of the embalmer's art. From the scientific side, one is told in Naples, there is no reason why time should efface the life-like. appearance of a body so preserved. The process is said to be Italian, though it was not this which was used in the case of Lenine, who is exposed at the Moscow Kremlin.

That Caruso's remains may be viewed, however, is not generally known. When the singer returned to Italy in July, 1921, he engaged a suite in a hotel at Corrento, a charming spot in the Bay of Naples. Growing ill, he hurried to Naples, where he stopped at the Vesuvius Hotel and called in specialists. He appeared to be recovering and spent his time trawing sketches, which he presented to guests and employees of the hostelry. It was one of the latter who had been promised a sketth by the great tenor who disclosed that his remains might be viewed today by all in the Naples cemetery.

"When he talked to me and promised me a sketch," said the employee, "he complained that he was not feeling well. He went to his suite, and four days later he was dead."

"He was a great singer and loved by all Americans," I said, by way of conversation.

"Signor, you must see him," hastened the employee.

"How is that possible?" I queried.

"Take a taxicab and in twenty minutes you are at the tomb of the great singer," he replied. "There will be some one there to show you."

The surgeon, the merchant and I called a taxi. In twenty minutes -we arrived in the city of tombs, which is on the outskirts of Naples. A few minutes more and we were gazing upon the clay of the man who had thrilled the world of music lovers and whose voice is still alive.

"Maestro di musica!" murmured the old tomb attendant as he folded back the thick layer of blankets over the glass inclosed bier and prepared to lock the tomb.

Curiosity

Our C.C. entry for this issue comes from the collection of Art Wilmouth. It is one of the personal records Edison made of Ford's Old Time Dance Orchestra for the Ford Motor Co. in 1926.

Ten of the masters were eventually issued on regular Diamond Discs, though "Sicilian Circle" was not one of them; "Valeeta Waltz" appeared as number 51705. Note the use of matrix numbers in place of catalogue numbers and the very unusual typeface used in labeling them.

Of all the leading companies doing business in the 1920's, Edison seems to have done the least amount of "personal" recording. We guess that this was primarily due to the higher cost of producing Diamond Discs, not to mention the limited number of machines available which could play them.

For more information about the Ford recordings, both disc and cylinder, see Ron Dethlefson's book Edison Blue Amberol Recordings. Volume II.

HERE & THERE

The Edison National Historic Site in West Orange, New Jersey is this year celebrating the Centennial of the building of Edison's laboratory in that city. Under the theme of "100 years of industrial research," a number of special events are planned throughout the year. For more information, write them at Main Street & Lakeside Ave., West Orange, NJ 07052.

John Petty recently called on Jim Walsh, who now resides in a Roanoke, Virginia nursing home. Those who admire Jim for his many years as columnist for Hobbies Magazine may want to have a copy of John's visit, which he taped on both audio and video cassette. While the tape is basically just an afternoon visit with the record historian (unfertunately, no great stories about bygone artists), it's still a nice memento of a man who is almost legendary among collectors. John says there is little action on the video, so the audio tape is just as acceptable. Postpaid prices are $2.00 for audio; $7.00 for video (VHS) from John A. Petty, Route 1, Box 54-A, Catawba, NC 28609.

The California Antique Phonograph Society plans their third annual phonograph show and sale for Sunday, August 9, 1987 at Griswolds Inn, 1500 S. Joe Martel is looking for information regarding pioneer artist Roger Harding. Anyone who can help in his research (especially regarding Harding's business during his last few years) is asked to contact Joe at 254 29th Street, Oakland, CA 94611.

In the review of the Cal Stewart book in our last issue, it was erroneously stated that the "Paw Paw Valley Railroad" story was never recorded. Bill Bryant informs us that it was indeed recorded—on Columbia cylinder no. 14025.

Segovia Dies in Spain

By FRANCISCO CONDE
The Associated Press

MADRID, Spain — Andres Segovia, whose artistry elevated the guitar from the flamenco tavern to the concert hall, has died at age 94.

Concert pianist Luis Galve, a friend for half a century, said the maestro died of a heart attack at 4 p.m. Tuesday while watching television with his wife Emilia, 51, and son Carlos Andres, 17, at their home in Madrid.

Radio and television stations paid homage by playing recorded works of the man acclaimed as the greatest classical guitarist of his time, who taught himself the instrument as a child and embarked on a life's mission of proving that it belonged on the concert stage.

"I was my own pupil and my own maestro" with the guitar, Segovia once told an interviewer. "We have traveled all through life without a single quarrel."

State television said he was "one of the great ambassadors of Spanish music and culture of the 20th century. The Spanish guitar is the best, and Master Segovia was its prophet."

In a performing career that began in 1909 and continued until a few months before his death, Segovia entranced audiences on five continents with his flawless precision and perfect sound,

He told an American interviewer in 1980 he had fulfilled the four tasks he assigned himself:

"To redeem the guitar from its flamenco associations, to develop a real musical repertoire for it, to travel to all civilized countries and play there in order to gain a following for it and to influence conservatories to take the guitar into their curriculum at the same dignified level as the piano, the violin, the cello or the voice."

Galve, 79, said Segovia had complained of heart pain since being hospitalized in New York in early April for "cardiac irregularities" while on a U.S. tour. He said Segovia cut the tour short because of his health.

The body will lie in state at the Royal Academy of Fine Arts from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. Thursday before burial in Madrid's San Isidro cemetery, Galve said.

Culture Minister Javier Solana called Segovia "one of the great figures in Spanish 20th century culture: the pride of, as well as an example for, his countrymen. An indefatigable worker and enthusiast, Segovia possessed a vitality as outstanding as his genius."

ANDRES SEGOVIA

THE NEW YORK TIMES SATURDAY, APRIL 11, 1987

Enrico Caruso Jr., 82; Actor and Son of Tenor

Enrico Caruso Jr., an actor, singer and the last surviving son of the great tenor, died after suffering a heart attack Thursday at his home in Jacksonville, Fla. He was 82 years old.

Mr. Caruso was born on Sept. 7, 1904. His mother was the soprano Ada Giachetti. Several years after his father's death in 1921, Mr. Caruso moved to Hollywood, where he starred in two Spanish-language motion pictures, "The Fortune Teller" (1934) and "The Singer of Naples" (1935).

Like his father, he was a tenor. In the late 1930's, he sang regular concerts in California, and made a concert tour of Cuba. After World War II, he gave up singing permanently and, under the name of Henry De Costa, worked as a department head for the import-export firm of Dunnington & Arnold until 1971. At the time of his death, he had just completed a book of memoirs, entitled "Enrico Caruso, My Father and My Family," with Andrew Farkas.

He is survived by his wife, Harriett Covington Caruso, of Jacksonville; two sons, Enrico Cesare, of Sacrofonto, Italy, and Wladimiro, of Milan; a half-sister, Gloria Murray of Florida; two grandchildren, and one great-grandson.

$50. Metal parts are gold-plated. Frankly, the quality of the Amberola cabinet is not the same grade as its excellent mechanism. While not shoddy in any respect, close examination reveals all the hallmarks of a hurried manufacture. We are told that the supplier of these cabinets has changed, and that a new design is imminent. Grade: B.

5) Overall Operation: The Amberola presents a curious polarization of qualities. The cabinet, as noted above, impedes access to records and their entry to and exit from the mandrel. The mechanism, however, is a wonderful improvement from the old styles. A single lever starts and stops the motor, and lowers and raises the stylus from the record. The record travels laterally beneath a stationary reproducer, and is even equipped with an automatic stop. A gilt knob changes the playing from 2-min. to 4-min. All of this, we felt, balanced the inconveniences of the cabinet.

OBITUARIES

Early in 1928, sorthly after his first appearance in this country, Victor made available the initial Red Seal records by Segovia. Of his playing, the 1929 catalogue said, "...it is entirely safe to say that no living man has either realized or mastered the possibilities of this charming and piquant instrument in a degree approaching the achievements of Segovia."

Enrico Caruso, Jr. recorded privately for RCA Victor in the 1930's. While not the same caliber as his celebrated parent, his voice was favorably compared to that of Tito Schipa. Not long ago Mr. Caruso was interviewed by National Public Radio at the time the U.S. commemorative stamp was issued in honor of his father.

We were sorry to learn of the sudden death of Victor researcher Ted Fagan (his and Bill Moran's second volume of the Victor encyclopedia will be reviewed in the next issue of the GRAPHIC). We understand that Ted's work has been preserved and that the Victor project will continue.

Collectors, whose interests extend further than the period normally covered by the GRAPH-IC, will be saddened to know of the recent deaths of Sammy Kaye (age 77) and Turk Murphy (age 71).

Conclusion: Both the Victrola XVI and the Amberola are high-grade instruments. The Victrola has been refined through 4 years of experience and represents, in all probability, the design by which others will be judged for years to come. The Victrola cabinet, built by Victor, is a thing of beauty, both in design and execution. The Victrola does its work well with no apologies necessary.

The Amberola, to be fair, is but a few months old. Its mechanism, however, is the culmination of Edison's years of experience in the field and stands at the pinnacle of cylinder technique. The cabinet, unfortunately, does not live up to expectations. This should serve as a lesson on the relative merits of "contracting out". The new cabinet, when available, may be far superior and place the Amberola on a par with the Victrola. Until then, in a market paying $200 for a piece of phonographic furniture, the Amberola must remain "second best". The choice may ultimately depend upon which type of record the customer prefers. Despite the belief of many in the cylinder's greater fidelity, events of the past few years may eventually make the customer's choice for him.

* * *

1987 Note: Shortly after this was written, the cabinet was changed, and was in the form commonly associated with the Amberola Ia and later the Ib.

Also: The Victrola lid decal is not the same one found on later Victrolas. Look closely!

= For Sale = Three Volumes of

Francis Jehl's

Complete set is in excellent condition and lavishly illustrated. The first two volumes are soft cover (original edition, I believe) and the third is hard cover. Postpaid to any destination for $150 for the set (I would break the set only if individual orders are received for each of the three volumes individually.

Cranford, New Jersey, Sunday, April 26 and Sunday, Sept. 20, 1987. Phonograph-music box-automated instrument show. One day only, 8 a.m. - 4 p.m., at the very accessible Best Western Coachman Inn, adjacent Exit 136, Garden State Parkway. Largest show and sale of vintage self-playing instruments in the Eastern United States. No early buyers' fee. Hundreds of buyers from four continents attended the September Cranford event -- some see why. The motel also offers pick-up service to close-by Newark Airport.

Your name and address bring a copy of our free newsletter, Noteworthy News, with feature stories describing the show. Admission only $3.

Whatever you are looking for, you will find it at Cranford; machines restored and unrestored, parts, memorabilia, records, supplies, literature, etc.

For further information, contact: Lynn Bilton, Box 25007, Chicago, IL 60625. Phone: (312) 677-7455.

We have recently stocked a wonderful metal tray with the Victor "His Master's Voice" trademark in full color. Unfortunately, the colors will not transfer to black and white, so the illustration above really looks nothing like the tray! Take our word for it ... the real thing is beautiful!

Use the tray to serve your guests, or use it as a decoration -- when displayed on a wall or shelf it will be the focal point of the room. Trays are oval, measuring  $14\frac{1}{2}$  x  $11\frac{1}{2}$ . Order extras for your friends.

** $3.79 each **

Shipping & Handling: 1 tray, $1.50 2 or more trays, $2.00

Canadian Orders: $3.35 shipping for one; $1.05 each additional tray.
